J. When it ended, Glean Potter had been baketball coach at BYU for just three years, baketball coach at BYU for just three years, and the state out of the same—quiet, reserved and courteous always.

Only one time did Potter hedge on the truth and that was at the bitter end Monday night after two TV stations released the story of his resignation. Potter defined the story of his resignation was always in the story of his resignation. Potter defined the story of his resignation of the story of the story as son it is story as son it is story as son as possible, said the head of the story as soon as possible, said the former head coach.

when Potter suspended Brian Frishman for the remain der of the season for insubordination.

With all the problems this year Potter says he's learned an important lesson about coaching, "I learned you had better play a player with a good attitude over the one who might have more ability but a poor attitude."

"It all comes back to what Bear Bryant said—I'll take the player with 75 per cent ability who gives his all 100 per cent of the time, over the player who has 100 per cent ability and puts out only 75 per cent of the time.

Potter ad mitted there was a communications problem on the team earlier in the season but he tried to remedy it in "When these things happen you have to look at it and see if you're part of the problem. I did and I tried to find a solution, I think that we succeeded and it taught me a lot," he said.

At one time other variety players were planning to leave the BYU basketball program after the season was over. He went to the locker room and informed the other players of his announcement to Potter. Three of the five named went to the coach and said they didn't feel the way Frishman and reported tells those who call with condolences "It's a rough business." The former Cougar mentor took his lumps this year and he admits it hasn't been easy. "If found that when you're winning everyone comes around and is your friend, but when you're losing you need a pat on the sketch and the provide of the provide that the provide it starts affecting the people you love. I've even been skicked around in public and it starts affecting the people you love. I've even been skicked around all over town and never hear any positive reienforcement. "When you see and hear your name kicked around all over town and never hear any positive comments it's pretty hard to continue," said Potter.

Most coaches rarely see any off season but this summer, as Potter told a friend of his, "It looks like my golf handicap will go down."

Free tax help, sponsored by a national accounting fraterity, is now available on campus for anyone with tax. The BYU chapter of Beta Alpha Psi has organized a Volunteer Individual Tax Assistance program (VITA) to meet the needs of students and the general public. The service is available from 2 p.m. to 5 p.m. on Tuesdays, Thursdays, and Fridays in the Elizabeth Dining Room, FTC. Blood, VITA chairman, says there has been a good response so far to the service. About 150 students, faculty and members ofthe public have been helped so far, he says, or about twenty a day. Blood notes that his volunteers, accounting students, are dealing mainly with three types of problems—checking completed tax forms for approval, sorting out complicated personal tax problems and answering general tax questions, should bring all the relevant documents. "Anyone coming should bring we2 forms and any records which substantiate claims for deductions—medical, contributions, taxes paid, interest paid and earned," he says.

He warned that the deadline for filing returns for 1974 is Aprill 15, and advised students to file as early as possible.

Conductor Robert Downs said he spends much time researching the very best literature for women voices that he an find. Sometimes there is a problem transferring choir pieces from men voices to women's, especially music from the Renaissance period.

Some of the pieces to be performed are Hungarian (Biksongs by Bella Bartok, Gustav Holst's Poems from Tennyson's The Princes, and Paslm 13 composed by Dolores Brown, graduate assistant to the Women's Choir, will sing a concert aria from Mozart and some English songs. Hirom's Ablizawa, dressed in native costume, will sing some songs from Japan.

The man who will take over as hairman of the Department of Ancient cripture this fall has spent over 30 ears building a background in the virglures criptures. Robert J. Matthews, who teaches Old estament, New Testament and the earl of Great Price, will replace Dr. tobert C. Patch September 1. Dr. Matthews said his future plans for he dpartment are "not only to help ned partment are "not only to help the plant of the scriptures, but to elp the Church Education System in eneral."

with an increased emphasis on ancieus-scripture.

Matthews has taught at BYU since 1971, but was involved in the LDS school system for I of years prior to that. In addition to teaching, he was a course writer and editor for seminaries and institutes.

Dr. Matthews has published many books dealing with the scriptures and the gospel. He has also written numerous articles for the New Era, the Ensign and The Relief Society Magazine.

He said his newest book, "Joseph

Smith's Translation of the Bible, History and Commentary," which is to be been seen Abarch 20, is the cultimation of the Bible Abarch 20, is the cultimation of the Commentary of the Commentary

Latter Day Saints, but the LDS Church has just received a microfilm copy within the last month.

Dr. Matthews said he would like to place "greater emphasis on the scriptures by providing conferences and symposia and by fostering research and writing in scriptural areas."

Giving in won't halt terrorist actions

A spoiled child who threatens to hold his breath until he turns blue if his unreasonable demands are not met uses the same tactics as a political terrorist—but the terrorist holds another person's breath.

March is off to a bloody start. Three terroristic incidents marred the first week. It seems that terrorism is a normal part of modern life.

The month began with the murder of U.S. Honorary Consul John Patrick Egan in Argentina. A left-wing Peronist group said they executed Egan as a strike against the Americanization of Argentina.

A second political kidnapping involved West Berlin's newly elected mayor Peter Lorenz. The Christian Democrat was released unharmed after the West German government released six anarchists from prison. The leftist-terrorists said there would be more abductions to insure freedom for more of their jailed comrades.

In Tel Aviv 18 died when eight Arab guerillas stipped into the city and captured hostages in a hotel. The bloodshed came when Israeli troops stormed the hotel. Seven guerillas were killed along with tourists and Israel soldiers.

Terrorism forces governments into the uncomfortable position of playing games with human lives. Should the government meet the terrorists' demands or put up a hard line and refuse to comply? It is a difficult decision to make.

The Argentine government made no moves to meet the demands of the terrorists but did try to find Egan and six eaptors. They found Egan on a dirt road, dead.

West Germany released six prisoners and the kidnapped political leaders returned. This action by the German government undoubtedly encouraged future terroristic abductions.

In Israel, the government did not concede to the terrorists but met their agression with military force. With the Mosiac eye-for-an-eye, tooth-for-a-tooth law of both Jews and Arsh, there will be relations and counterattacks that will senselessly kill countless more. What should the intimidated governments do? Moshe Dyan, Israel's former defense minister, claims "We must never give in to terrorists." Dyan is probably right. Human life is precious and should not be gambled with but the terrorist, like the immature child, must be taught that he can not frighten others into pacifying him.

Tourney proliferation dilutes cage excellence

By BRUCE LOWITT

AP Sport Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Do you get the feeling that it won't be long before there are more college basketball tournaments than there are team's life colleges are becoming a miniversion of the pros.

It seems as if he colleges are becoming a miniversion of the pros. The prosecution of prose cetting at least a slice of the pre-up remarks a few crumbs.

In these days of rampant inflation, the word "champion" has been devalued. Almost every team could be the champion of something. It seems to be almost fashionable to turn down an invitation to a playoff, as North Carolina State did this year and Maryland did a year ago.

The National Invitation Tournament is the grandfather of all college tourneys. There was a time when a telephone call from New York's Madison Square Garden, with a voice saying, "How would you like to play ...," was pounced upon by colleges.

It was an invitation to be one of only eight teams to play in the palace of basketball. To with was the ultimate goal. But simply to the same team to the late phone call, was almost as important.

Now the NIT field has been expanded to the amount of the team and none seem as strong as any one used to be. With the avalanche of alphabet tournaments—NAIA, NCIT and three divisions of the NCAA—the NIT is left to pick up the castoffs, the uninvited, and to be turned down once in a while, as NC.

The result is that the NIT has only one team listed in The Associated Press Top Twenty 14th-ranked Clemson, which lost 10 of its 27 games and would up less-than-best in its own league. The rest of the field includes Pittsburgh and Providence, each in 15 on the property of the same short of the National Providence, each 17-10, and Mannattan, 13-11, plus St. Peter's, 15-11, and St. John's, 19-8, neither of which was good enough to make it to the NCAA tourney.

"I'd suggest you amend that to read 'voluntarily'.
